AMUSEMENTS

TOM MOORE AT THE BUTLER TONIGHT.

All the world loves a lover," is a familiar old saying which applies directly to Tom Moore, the handsome young Goldwyn star who will be seen at the Butler today in "Heartsease," a delightful comedy-drama with England as locale. From the beginning of the story Tom Moore reveals his love for a beautiful heiress. He does, and the love is of the "at first sight" variety, which makes it still more interesting. He is a young composer in poor financial circumstances. The girl hears him playing some of his original compositions on the organ, and immediately falls in love with the curly-haired young genius. And how he can make love. As a screen idol he is a champion, but when he is seen in "Heartsease" his admirers will greatly outnumber the present multitude. Making love on the screen is not as easy as many persons suppose, and when Tom Moore discloses the artistic understanding of his role's requirements on the screen it causes instant recognition and lasting appreciation, both by men and women. Added to the feature will be a two-reel Mack Sennett comedy entitled "Among Those Present." Tomorrow, Wallace Reid, in one of his new pictures, "Hawthorne of the U. S. A.," and Pearl White in "The Black Secret." Monday, William Farnum, in Zane Grey's great epic novel, "The Last of the Manes."

TRADE GOING TO TONO. ELY EDITOR COMPLAINS

Under the caption of "Wake Up Ely" the Ely Record has the following to say:

"There is not the slightest doubt in the mind of anyone that the merchants and business men of Ely desire to see this town grow in population and wealth, and eventually become the supply point for eastern and central Nevada. Nor is there any doubt that this result can be achieved. But it cannot be accomplished unless these merchants and business men awake from their lethargy, and infuse a little 'pep' into their methods. While they are taking the business as it comes to them, other towns are proceeding to gather the persimmons while the gathering is good, and very soon our local talent will have to content themselves with such scraps as may be left. Let us give one or two illustrations: Recently a new mining town was launched, now known as Arrowhead; a large amount of money has been and is being spent there for the development of its mineral resources, and much more will be. The business men of Tonopah, with their characteristic enterprise, are giving this new camp hearty support, not only with their mouths, but in a very material and financial way. That is the way new camps are made. They are not doing this from any unselfish motive, but because they know that this bread cast upon the waters is going to return to them in the shape of increased business, and they are bending every effort to make Tonopah the town to which the people of Arrowhead will journey when they have purchases to make. True, a number of Ely merchants have linked themselves with the fortunes of this new camp, and the people of this district have subscribed generously to the new enterprise; but what is of greater importance is that more of our business men should interest themselves, should join together, and by concerted action establish Ely as the supply point of that district.

"Still another new town has sprung up recently, called Silverton, and here is another opportunity to add to our business, but no effort seems to be made in that direction, while again Tonopah is the little busy bee that is gathering the honey and creating another artery of trade, and it doesn't take very many articles of this kind to rejuvenate a dull town. Unless we wish to remain moribund, why not rejuvenate?"

"And now Hamilton, right at our very door, is coming to the front and bids fair to be on the producing list before many months roll by, and it looks as though Eureka will take that plum from the listless hands of Ely, with the aid of San Francisco. Isn't it about time to turn over and look at the clock."

"What all these camps need, and must have, is support. Not alone the support of the Biblical jawbone, but something much more material. Every business man of the district should, to some extent at least, give his financial as well as his moral support to the meritorious enterprises of these camps. Not as a charitable proposition—they don't want that—but as a good business proposition. They are trying to make a success, and their success means Ely's success. Even one or two producing mines in each camp will be a continual source of business for years to come, and that is worth trying for. There is not a business house in Ely that will not receive some substantial benefit from the mining activities of these camps if they help them in their efforts, and the miners can't be blamed if they recognize their friends, when they have any business to hand out."

"Let our business men turn over a new leaf and get busy."
